Two more suspected measles cases ID'd

Up-to-date vaccinations urged. Both individuals had come in contact with province's first confirmed case this year

MARCO VIGLIOTTI
marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

Health officials in Saskatchewan are investigating another two suspected cases of measles in the Regina region.

At a joint press conference on Monday, officials from the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region (RQHR) and the provincial health ministry announced the suspected carriers had come into contact with another individual, who was revealed last week as the first confirmed measles case in Saskatchewan this year.

"People who were exposed received a letter letting them know that they had been exposed to measles," Dr. Denise Werker, Saskatchewan's deputy chief medical officer, said of the response to the first confirmed case. "In fact, the two suspect cases are contacts of that initial case."

Officials say both suspected carriers were born after 1970. People born before that year are assumed to be immune from contracting the disease.

Werker specifically urged parents to ensure their children were up-to-date on their vaccinations. She said the highest priority was children under the age of five, who are more likely to sustain severe complications from the disease.

Feeling the effects

The earliest a person will experience symptoms is roughly one week following exposure.

Officials also warned that members of the public might have been exposed to the airborne ailment at various locations around Regina between Jan. 13 to 17.

Locations include the Chapters and attached Starbucks on Jan. 13 from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and the Lawson Aquatic Centre from 12:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Jan. 14.

The hours given out do not simply reflect the time the suspected carrier spent at a particular establishment, said Dr. Tania Diener, medical health officer with the RQHR.

This is because the illness can linger in the air for two hours after a carrier has left.

If someone believes they have come into contact with the measles, Diener urged them to call their primary care practitioner first, instead of simply heading down to a clinic and potentially exposing more people.

In the wake of this news, the Saskatoon Health Region is clarifying the information it sends to practitioners on how to diagnose measles, said deputy medical officer Dr. John Mark Opondo.

As the outbreak has emerged in the middle of flu season, he noted, the province's health regions are in constant communication through regularly scheduled teleconference meetings.

Complications from the disease include ear infections, diarrhea and even an infection of the brain lining.

Saskatchewanian playing in Super Bowl for first time

NFL. Seahawks punter Jon Ryan to face off against 49ers in February

Family and friends of Regina-born-and-raised punter Jon Ryan are celebrating his achievement in becoming the first Saskatchewanian to play in the Super Bowl.

His team, the Seattle Seahawks, won 23-17 over the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday to claim the NFL's NFC championship and advance to the title game on Feb. 2 in East Rutherford, N.J.

"I haven't had any sleep just thinking about it," Ryan's mother, Barb, told Metro at her Regina home on Monday.

"We get excited for every game, so you can just imagine how ecstatic we are."

Ryan, 32, was a fixture in Regina's minor football leagues while growing up, before playing at Sheldon-Williams Collegiate and eventually joining the University of Regina Rams.

Rams head coach Frank McCrystal, who has been with the team since 1984, said he saw Ryan long ago as a "special athlete" who would go far.

"He was just an all-around athlete," McCrystal said of Ryan, who later played for the Winnipeg Blue Bombers before jumping to the NFL with the Green Bay Packers.

"He couldn't just kick really well — he was also a receiver, a basketball player and really good in lacrosse."

McCrystal shares the Ryan family's excitement about the Super Bowl match against the AFC champion Denver Broncos.

"We're really pleased for him," he said, "because any time you've done something like that, you've really reached the pinnacle of your profession."

According to Ryan's eldest sister Erica Honoway, their mother, two other siblings Jill Scheer and Steve Ryan and their spouses will cheer on Ryan and the Seahawks from the stands at MetLife Stadium.

"Everything about football is a family event for us," Honoway said, "and with Jon playing, you can imagine just how proud and excited we all are."

Barb added that she's grateful for support they've received from neighbours and strangers alike in Regina.

"I've had people come up to me and say they've never watched football until they found out that Jon plays," Barb said. "It's so touching."

And with a final cheer, the proud mother shouted, "Go Seahawks!" SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO

Ukrainian-Canadians worry about escalating violence

Members of Saskatchewan's Ukrainian community say they're disappointed that protests in their homeland's capital city of Kyiv turned to mass violence this past weekend.

Violence between anti-government demonstrators and police erupted on Sunday night and carried into Monday after the passing of what's being called an anti-protest law, which significantly increases fines and imposes jail terms.

Iryna Matsiuk, who moved to Canada from Ukraine in 2011 and lives in Saskatoon, is concerned for that country's future as a democracy.

"We're disappointed and sad that, unfortunately, the president, the cabinet ministers and the government took this action against protesters," Matsiuk said, citing two months of peaceful protests with no government response.

"I'm concerned about the country and the future, and about the well-being of those who are taking active action."

On Monday, hundreds of protesters hurled rocks and stun grenades in Kyiv, while police responded with tear gas.

Though the protests initially targeted a decision by Ukrainian President Viktor Yanukovych to shelve a trade agreement with the European Union in order to instead build ties with Russia, Matsiuk said the focus of the demonstrations has shifted to the government's anti-democratic moves.

Two boys presumed dead in house fire

The bodies of two children were found in the wreckage of a house fire in Pelican Narrows, Sask., this past weekend.

RCMP responded to the fire on Saturday morning, and further examination at the scene the next day revealed the victims.

There were six people at the residence, and two boys aged nine and 10 are unaccounted for.

Cpl. Dallas Fee said it's believed that the two boys are the victims, but an autopsy will be conducted to confirm that.

In addition, a 10-year-old girl suffered burns and was taken to a hospital in Flin Flon, Man., before being transported to Winnipeg for further treatment.

Fee said that while the cause of the fire remains undetermined, investigators suspect it was accidentally ignited by a candle. METRO

Province pays for Memorial Cup loss

The Saskatchewan government is taking a hit of about $668,000 on the Memorial Cup junior hockey championship held in Saskatoon last May.

The province has approved the payment to the Canadian Hockey League because the event didn't meet a profit guarantee of $3.5 million that was made when Saskatoon bid for the championship.

Tim McMillan, minister responsible for Tourism Saskatchewan, said the hockey tournament made about $2.5 million and was one of the best attended in history.

The province also put up $250,000 to upgrade rink boards and glass, bringing the total it spent on the Memorial Cup to close to $918,000.

McMillan said the Memorial Cup generated about $11 million in economic spinoff for Saskatoon, so it was worth the money. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Israel. Harper receives standing ovations for speech calling Israel's opponents anti-Semites, as pair of members storm out

Prime Minister Stephen Harper addresses the Knesset in Jerusalem on Monday. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Stephen Harper warned Monday of a new age of anti-Semitism, staking new ground in his allegiance to Israel by telling the country's parliamentarians that those who oppose the Jewish state are little more than hateful anti-Semites.

The loathing for Jews that resulted in the "horrors of the death camps" of Nazi Germany was crude and ignorant, Harper said in a historic speech to the Knesset, the first such address before the Israeli parliament by a Canadian prime minister.

"But in much of the western world, the old hatred has been translated into more sophisticated language for use in polite society," he said.

"People who would never say they hate and blame the Jews for their own failings or the problems of the world instead declare their hatred of Israel and blame the only Jewish state for the problems of the Middle East."

Harper's speech was greeted by several prolonged standing ovations — and one dramatic outburst that served to illustrate the tense relations that characterize the Jewish-Arab relationship in the region.

"Israel is an apartheid state," shouted Ahmad Tibi, an Arab-Israeli member of parliament who then stormed out of the Knesset, followed by a colleague.

The pair angrily strode from the chamber after Harper assailed the "twisted logic" of making such a comparison to South Africa's racist regime.

Throughout his speech, Harper looked back into history, touching not just on the Holocaust but Canada's own refusal in the 1930s to help Jewish refugees, something he deemed a "terrible mistake."

He spoke of the founding of Israel as a place where people could "seek shelter from the shadow of the worst racist experiment in history."

While criticism of Israeli government policy isn't anti-Semitic, Harper said, criticism that targets only Israel while ignoring violence and oppression in its neighbours is unacceptable.

"It is, thus, a Canadian tradition to stand for what is principled and just, regardless of whether it is convenient or popular," Harper said. "But, I would argue, support today for the Jewish state of Israel is more than a moral imperative. It is also of strategic importance, also a matter of our own, long-term interests."

Harper said the forces that have threatened Israel "every single day of its existence" threaten all countries, "as 9/11 graphically showed us."

The prime minister said he refused to single out Israel for criticism, saying it is easy to follow the international crowd and focus only on one country — a "go-along-to-get-along" approach he described as both weak and wrong.

But Canada would be quick to welcome a new sovereign Palestinian state if its leaders chose democracy and peace, he added. THE CANADIAN PRESS

For many on Sochi's outskirts, the Olympic project is no game

Irina Kharchenko walks away from her house beside the screen separating her yard and a federal highway in the village of Vesyoloye, outside Sochi, Russia, on Nov. 27, 2013. As the Winter Games are getting closer, many Sochi residents are complaining that their living conditions are getting worse, and authorities are deaf to their grievances. ALEXANDER ZEMLIANICHENKO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new $635-million highway on the outskirts of Sochi stands next to a crumbling apartment block with a red "SOS!" banner on its roof.

The residents of 5A Akatsy St. have lived for years with no running water or sewage system. Construction for the 2014 Winter Games has made their lives more miserable. The new highway has cut them off from the city centre.

The slum is one of the many facets of a hidden dark side in the host city of next month's Winter Olympics, which stands side-by-side with the glittering new construction projects that President Vladimir Putin is touting as a symbol of Russia's transformation to a modern economy.

While state-run TV trains its cameras on luxury malls, sleek stadiums and high-speed train links, thousands of ordinary people in the Sochi area put up with squalor and environmental waste: Villagers living next to an illegal dump filled with Olympic construction waste, families whose homes are sinking into the earth, city dwellers suffering chronic power cuts despite promises to improve electricity.

Putin promoted the Sochi Games, which begin on Feb. 7, as a unique opportunity to bring investment to the Black Sea resort and improve living standards for its 350,000 residents. Looking back at those promises, many residents, weary from years of living in the midst of Russia's biggest construction project in modern history, say they have yet to see any improvement in their lives and point to an array of negative effects.

Support our athletes. Wear red and white, but leave the face paint to Ronald Die-hard fans planning to cheer on Canadian athletes at the Sochi Olympic Winter Games next month may want to hold back on the face painting.

A recent poll conducted by Mondelez Canada shows that if they had to pick, Canadian Olympians said that face painting was their least favourite fan behaviour (20 per cent). Instead, 77 per cent said cheering and shouting, holding up signs of support (73 per cent) and dressing up in red and white (71 per cent) are the top ways to motivate them.

Three-time Olympic gold medallist Jennifer Botterill said while face painting had the lowest impact for her, seeing a sea of red and white always did the trick.

"In our rink, every single time that we played, everyone was in Canada gear wearing the red and white," she said. "And as an athlete you're focused, but at the same time you take in some of that energy and you notice how much the Canadians are supporting you."

But whatever fans do, Botterill said the athletes out there do notice and appreciate it all.

"It's great for them to show their support and their enthusiasm in their most authentic way, so however they want to support is really meaningful for the athletes," she said.

The survey also found that 72 per cent of athletes love receiving handwritten letters, while 62 per cent say they like to hear from fans on social media and 70 per cent said they prefer email letters of support.

In fact, Botterill said she made it a point to put up all the letters she received every time she competed at the Olympics.

"At my first Olympic Games, my roommate Becky Kellar and I put up all the letters that were sent to us in our rooms in the village," she said. "We put every single one up on our walls, so our walls were covered from the support from Canadians … even the last Olympics, I continued to do that."

With this (insured) ring I thee wed

For better, for worse. With the cost of tying the knot soaring, couples are committing to insurance for the big day

Worried about the bride getting cold feet? There's an insurance policy for that.

With the cost of the average American wedding reaching about $26,000 US, insurers have been selling a growing number of policies to protect against losses from extreme weather, illness and, in one firm's case, even a sudden change of heart.

Cheryl Winter spent $500 US for Hartford-based Travelers Cos. Inc. to cover her daughter's $50,000 US destination wedding last October in New Orleans, where her biggest concern was a potential hurricane. The weather co-operated, but the limousine never showed up. Her daughter took a taxi to the church, and they used the insurance policy to claim the deposit money they couldn't get back from the limo driver.

The insurance is offered by a small number of companies. Insurers declined to provide data on the number of customers beyond saying they are growing steadily. It can cover losses from issues ranging from bankrupt wedding halls to cancellations forced by unexpected military deployments. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cold-feet coverage

For parents concerned about a relationship souring before the exchange of vows, Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. offers change-of-heart insurance. It's been available since 2007, but the program administrator said the fraud rate soared in the early years as policies were bought for couples who were known to be fighting. That coverage now applies only if the bride or groom calls off the wedding more than nine months beforehand.

Severe weather. Insurance industry hit by record $3.2B in payouts in 2013

Ice, floods and thunderstorms made 2013 the worst year ever for insured losses in Canada.

The Insurance Bureau of Canada says the December ice storms in southern Ontario and eastern Canada caused more than $200 million worth of insured losses, pushing the total payouts to policy holders for the year to $3.2 billion.

The largest disaster continues to be the torrential rains and floods that soaked southern Alberta in June, causing $1.74 billion in insured damage. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Egyptian beer brewer's tomb dug up

Anyone who saw The Mummy will know you should expect surprises while searching for ancient artifacts in Egypt, but Japanese researchers were still shocked during a dig around the necropolis of Luxor. The Waseda University team discovered the tomb of a royal beer brewer who was serving up frothy treats 3,200 years ago, and leader Dr. Jiro Kondo was thrilled.

What have we learned about Egypt's drinking culture?

The owner of the tomb is Khonso Em Heb, who was the chief of the workshop for Mut as well as the chief brewer of the temple of Mut. Probably he was an overseer and controlled daily foods and beer supply to the goddess Mut at the Temple of Mut in Thebes. In ancient Egyptian society, beer was popular and cheap liquor for workers, but also a special sacred drink as the offering to the goddess.

What do we know about the brewer? Was his a very important role?

We did not have any records apart from his titles to say if he was very respected or not. However, he would be a high-rank officer belonging to the temple of Mut. METRO WORLD NEWS

TICK-TOCK, DRINK COFFEE ON THE CLOCK

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

In the dark depths of winter, it can be a challenge to convince myself to leave the house, but nothing will force me out the front door in freezing temperatures like the need for caffeine.

Back in the 1980s, Starbucks president and CEO Howard Schultz envisioned the urban coffeehouse as a kind of "third place" between work and home, a space for individuals to come together to engage in conversation and develop a sense of community. Twenty years and 20,000 plus stores later, most Starbucks locations have been colonized by armies of laptop-wielding students and freelancers who treat these cafés as their own personal workspaces, spreading out over multiple tables and taking advantage of the free Wi-Fi for hours at a time.

And it's not just coffee shop patrons who tend to overstay their welcome. Managers at a McDonald's in Flushing, N.Y., are at a standoff with a group of elderly customers who have been parking themselves in the seating area for long periods of time and refusing to leave. While most fast food restaurants try to enforce a standard 20-minute time limit, these defiant customers have been camping out on a daily basis from early in the morning until late at night while nursing only a cup of coffee or splitting a small order of french fries amongst themselves. Not only is this bad manners, it's also bad for business. The lack of available seating for new paying customers has prompted the staff to call the local police to help eject the group, but these rebellious elders keep coming back.

In any city there is a definite need for public gathering spaces, but private companies shouldn't be obligated to provide this type of service. So while it is nice for these seniors to be able to come together and socialize in a warm, well-lit environment, there also seems to be a gross sense of entitlement on display from these colonizing customers who insist on lingering all day long without paying their fair share. Some people might criticize McDonald's for kicking them out into the cold, but even monolithic corporations have a right to manage their locations in a profitable way.

In Europe, one particularly unique café seems to have solved the problem of loitering clients by entirely rethinking the concept of time limits. At Ziferblat, a Russian chain which opened its first U.K. outpost in London, England earlier this month, guests don't pay per beverage, rather they're charged about five cents for every minute they spend inside the establishment.

Named after the Russian word for clock face, Ziferblat offers a unique kind of community space where clients are treated more like micro-tenants than customers. Visitors are welcome to use the kitchen facilities, provided they clean up after themselves, and enjoy complimentary tea, coffee and snack foods. In fact, everything is free except for the time you spend there.

Two years after launching their first outpost in Russia, the founders of Ziferblat stress that the café is more of a social project than a business model. But this pay-per-minute concept might just be the right approach when it comes to combating those free-loading regulars.

Whether it was Facebook's ever-changing settings, Google's willingness to put your profile pic next to an ad somewhere, or leaked documents suggesting the U.S. government is spying on pretty much everyone, 2013 was the year where privacy concerns went mainstream. There's plenty of reasons to care about privacy, even if you've got nothing to hide. So let's make a belated New Year's resolution to take back control over our own data. Here are some web browser extensions to help clean up your trail of online bread crumbs:

AdBlock Plus:

I honestly don't remember what the Internet looked like before I installed AdBlock Plus. In addition to blocking pesky banner ads and pop-ups, this extension also disables third-party tracking cookies and scripts.

Disconnect:

This app works on almost any web browser (even Internet Explorer!) to block third-party tracking cookies and other website scripts. Disconnect also protects you from tracking by social media sites like Facebook and Twitter, which follow you around the web collecting your browsing data for their coffers.

HTTPS Everywhere:

Considered a must-have by security experts, this extension shunts you to a more secure connection on any website that offers it. It's a very easy way to make your browsing more private without lifting a finger.

Captain Phillips

Director. Paul Greengrass

Stars. Tom Hanks

The high-seas survival drama Captain Phillips raises the pulse and tweaks the conscience. Directed by Paul Greengrass, who makes smart thrillers, and starring Tom Hanks in his best role in years, this isn't simply a tale of heroism and adventure. There is anxiety on both sides of the gun. We certainly cheer on Hanks as real-life seafarer Capt. Richard Phillips. In the spring of 2009, Phillips faced almost certain death after his cargo ship and crew of 20 were hijacked off the coast of Somalia by four armed men who demanded millions of dollars in ransom. We are also asked to consider the desperation of the four pirates. The well-rounded script by Billy Ray (The Hunger Games, Shattered Glass), based on Phillips' own account, shows how the hijackers are driven by extreme poverty and also by the warlord's bullets that await them back home. Hanks dials down his usual ebullience to radiate quiet determination as Phillips. This film leaves you not singing God Bless America, but rather pondering a dysfunctional world where hollow-eyed men of skin and bones feel compelled to take on a superpower.

Fallon owns the night

From Jay to Jimmy.
Late Night host gears up to take the Tonight seat from Leno, but will his style stay the same?

Jay Leno, left, and Jimmy Fallon pose backstage at the Golden Globe Awards in this Jan. 2013 file photo. Leno is set to wrap up his 22-year run as host of The Tonight Show, and Fallon — who has hosted Late Night since 2009 — will take over the gig. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Jimmy Fallon's Tonight show, which debuts next month with actor Will Smith and U2 as guests, will look familiar to people who appreciate his current work in the time slot following Jay Leno.

Fallon said he doesn't expect to change his brand of comedy to tailor himself to an earlier time slot. Fallon and his successor at Late Night, Seth Meyers, met with reporters Sunday as NBC begins the delicate process of a late-night transition.

"This show has completely changed from when I first started," Fallon said of Late Night, which he has hosted for five years. "I feel like we've blossomed into what will become the new Tonight show."

He rejected the idea of changes to make himself more appealing to an older, middle American audience that likes Leno. It's a delicate subject at NBC, where executives believe Conan O'Brien's limited appeal doomed their first effort to replace Leno. The executives anticipate Fallon's light-hearted comedy translating better.

Leno closes his two-decade run on Tonight Feb. 6 with Billy Crystal and Garth Brooks as guests. On Feb. 17, Fallon debuts a week's worth of shows at midnight following NBC's coverage of the Winter Olympics. He moves into his regular time slot a week later, followed by Meyers, who has Saturday Night Live chum Amy Poehler booked as his first guest.

NBC's entertainment president, Robert Greenblatt, said he'd like to keep Leno at NBC, perhaps to host regular specials. Fallon said he's not worrying about whether Leno leaves NBC and decides to keep working in late-night TV elsewhere.

Fallon said he called Leno when he got the Late Night job to reassure him he wasn't gunning for Leno's gig. He said they have spoken regularly, and he's taken some of Leno's advice, most prominently to make his nightly monologues longer.

"He's a good guy," Fallon said.

Fallon's Tonight show "should be goofy and fun and make everybody laugh. That's our job," he said. He said he appreciates showing different sides of celebrities by getting them involved in skits or games, like when Tom Cruise cracked two raw eggs on his head. Fallon's musical skits are among his most memorable. He said he alerted New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie's office ahead of time about his recent duet with Bruce Springsteen that spoofs Christie's traffic jam scandal.

Jimmy Fallon on the style of his Late Night show

Although Fallon is moving Tonight to New York from the West Coast, he said he will take the show on the road, including to Los Angeles, for a couple of weeks a year.

Some critics have noted that the formal title of the show is changing from the Tonight Show With Jay Leno to the Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon. Fallon said it was an homage to the show's roots.

Meyers said the legacy of Late Night is that hosts get to do weird things and that people have a little more patience with it.

But he seems very much the traditionalist. The current head writer of Saturday Night Live values writing, and he's brought the author of his SNL Weekend Update segments over to lead his own writing team. Meyers said he's looking to build a stable of writer-performers and that a strong monologue will be key to his show. "If you get too hung up on the legacy of what you're getting into, it gets in the way of the work," Meyers said. "Our goal is to be as funny as we can and get better every night."

Hader, Wiig take dramatic turn at Sundance

The trailer for The Skeleton Twins will likely sell it as a comedy when this freshly minted Sundance 2014 hit heads to theatres later this year.

That's how these things go, and the movie does star two of the funniest people going: Kristen Wiig and Bill Hader, former partners in mirth on TV's Saturday Night Live. They play squabbling twin siblings Maggie and Milo, estranged for 10 years through family dysfunction and life interruptions, who are suddenly brought together again.

It's very funny, especially in the most-talked-about scene since the film had its world premiere Saturday to audience and critical raves. It's the one where an angry Maggie struggles to keep from smiling and joining in when Milo starts lip-synching and dancing to Nothing's Gonna Stop Us Now, a cheeseball 1987 life-affirming pop hit by Starship.

But what really makes this film, which Craig Johnson directed and co-wrote (with Mark Heyman), is the true-to-life drama it seamlessly folds into the narrative.

When we first meet Maggie and Milo, they're on opposite coasts — he's in L.A., she's in upstate New York — yet they're joined in the desperate acts of suicide attempts. It's a grim coincidence (or is it?) and it's not spoiling anything to say their failed exit bids brings them together under one roof, where they have to deal with serious issues related to their broken childhood, chronic depression and bad life choices.

Wiig and Hader have long been known for their comedy, and they previously teamed on the big screen for the comic coming-of-ager Adventureland, which premiered at Sundance 2009. With The Skeleton Twins, Wiig and Hader show they have impressive dramatic chops, while still keeping us smiling. Nothing's gonna stop them now. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Tumblr got a taste of Blue Ivy's White House visit over the weekend. TUMBLR: IAM.BEYONCE.COM

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

The great thing about two-year-olds is that glamour doesn't exist for them. Sure, it's great for a baby if her parents are huge pop stars who hobnob at the White House, but the number one item on her agenda is still "Doggy doggy doggy doggy doggy."

Beyoncé visited said White House this past weekend to perform for Michelle Obama's 50th birthday, and she brought husband Jay Z and their daughter Blue Ivy along for the ride. Blue, clad in cat ears and an adorable white tulle gown that I would have murdered for when I was little, got to check out the White House Christmas tree and watch her mom perform, according to the sweet photos posted on her mama's Tumblr.

But could any of that compare to the sublime fuzziness of the Obama's Portuguese water dog, Bo? Beyoncé posted several blurry but adorable snaps on Tumblr of Bo and Blue making friends.

Maybe, instead of renting out a zoo and buying her a miniature Porsche for her second birthday last week, Jay and B should have gotten Blue a puppy.

Michael C. Hall won't slash the idea of recreating his killer role

Possible bad news for Oregon loggers: Michael C. Hall won't rule out a return to playing Dexter. But he'd want to see the finish line.

Hall, promoting his movie Cold in July at the Sundance Film Festival, said in an interview over the weekend that he agreed with Showtime executives who recently declared that any potential spin-off series would have to include Hall.

"Masuka! I would watch that," he joked, referring to the show's humorous forensics specialist Vince Masuka, played by C.S. Lee.

More seriously, Hall said of a possible spin-off series, "I can't even wrap my mind around that. And it's all just theoretical until there is some sort of script reflecting somebody's idea of where it could possibly go. But it's hard for me to imagine what that would be."

Hall, 42, also won't rule out a return to TV more generally.

"Yeah, as far as playing Dexter again for an undefined amount of time, that's a little daunting to consider. But doing another television series ... There's a lot of amazing stuff on TV. I don't want to do that right away. But I wouldn't say never to that."

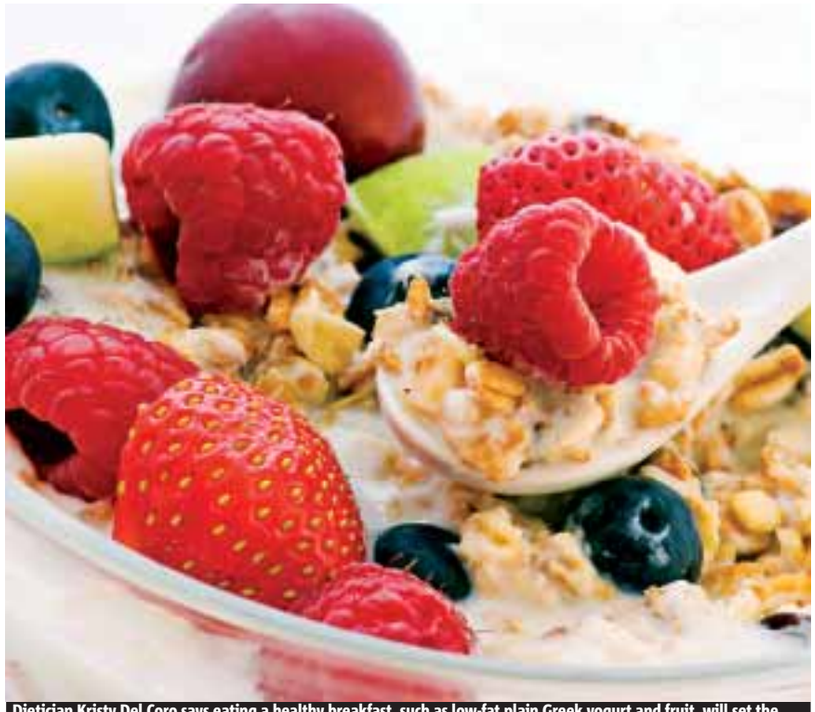
5 steps for a healthier you

It's not as hard as you think. Sometimes it's as easy as getting out for a walk and drinking more water



Dietician Kristy Del Coro says eating a healthy breakfast, such as low-fat plain Greek yogurt and fruit, will set the tone for the entire day. ISTOCK

Committing to living a healthier lifestyle doesn't have to mean major dietary restrictions and rigorous workouts.

Kristy Del Coro, a registered dietitian and nutritionist in New York City, offers five easy tips in getting healthy.

Eat breakfast

Eating a healthy breakfast sets the tone for the day. Most studies show skipping breakfast to "save your calories" does just the opposite, causing people to consume more calories later in the day.

Your best bet? Start with lean protein, complex carbohydrates and some healthy fat to give you energy and keep you satisfied until your next meal. Some good go-to combinations are whole grain toast with all-natural nut butter (peanut, almond, walnut); steel-cut oatmeal topped with berries and unsalted nuts; low-fat Greek plain yogurt with fresh fruit; or, if you have a little extra time in the morning, an omelet made with one egg and two or three egg whites, easy-to-cook veggies like spinach and mushrooms.

Get up and get out

One of the first things you can do for your health is to move more. Small changes like getting off the subway a stop early, taking the stairs at work or carving out 10 minutes on your lunch break to go for a walk really make a difference.

Hydrate, hydrate, hydrate!

An easy first step in feeling healthy is to rehydrate. This means taking a hiatus from sugary drinks and alcoholic beverages, and loading up on caffeine-free, sugar-free fluids. Any variation of water will do — seltzer, mineral or tap. To keep a little excitement in your beverage, I suggest adding some slices of fresh citrus (grapefruit, orange, lemon or lime) or even fresh mint for natural sweetness.

Curb your sweet tooth

One of your priorities in starting fresh is to swap out those nutrient-poor simple carbohydrates with nutrient-dense complex carbohydrates like fruits and vegetables, whole grains and legumes.

If you've really developed a sweet tooth (craving sweets after every meal), you may need to go cold turkey to help get on track. Before you know it, the cravings will subside and you can go back to enjoying sweet treats every once in a while as part of a balanced diet.

Set yourself up for success

To ensure success, it is a good idea to plan ahead. Think of at least one new positive step you can take per week that you know you can achieve. Whether it's focusing on exercise, curbing your sweet tooth or eating more balanced meals, it may pay off more in the long run to just start with one instead of trying to achieve everything at once.

Whatever you choose, create an environment conducive to achieving that goal.

This may mean signing up for a fun exercise class at the gym with a friend, getting rid of any tempting sweets in the house, or stocking your fridge full of colourful fruits and vegetables that inspire you to cook healthy delicious meals at home.

For many people, selecting one area to focus on at a time is less overwhelming and often more realistic.

Tips to help you get to sleep — and stay asleep

Dr. Robert Oexman, director of the Sleep to Live Institute, has these tips for making the most out of your shut-eye in 2014:

Make a commitment to sleep. If you have to wake up at 7 a.m. to get to work, start preparing for bed at 10:30 p.m. Darken the room, do not watch TV or work on the computer. Do something calming like taking a hot bath or shower. Get into bed at 11 p.m. and find yourself resting your way to health.

Take advantage of the cold weather and turn your thermostat down. Your room temperature should be around 19 degrees Celsius. If that temperature is too cold for you, use blankets to stay warm. The cool room allows your core body temperature to decline, which is necessary to fall asleep and stay asleep.

Don't let the early darkness rob you of sleep. If you find yourself falling asleep in the evening before it is time to go to bed, expose yourself to light and get up and move around. If you nap before bed it will make it more difficult to fall asleep and stay asleep.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

CAN KEEP COLD AND FLU AT BAY

NEWS CANADA

We have all heard it — the home remedies to cure a cold or flu told to us by the friend of a friend of a friend who just swears it always works.

Some people consume copious amounts of a specialty tea, while others are proponents of sweating out your sickness. Some mix cough syrup concoctions and others are convinced you have to ride out the storm.

The best way, however, to ease seasonal cold and flu ailments, like runny nose, sore throat and aching body, is to protect yourself before you get sick.

Here are some tips to help you keep seasonal illnesses away.

1. Get the flu shot. It's free and it can prevent the flu from taking hold up to 90 per cent of the time among healthy adults and children.
2. Wash your hands with soap and water thoroughly and often.
3. Keep alcohol-based hand sanitizer handy with at least 60 per cent alcohol content.
4. Cover your mouth and nose with your arm or use a tissue when you cough or sneeze to help keep stuff off hands and dispose of the tissue immediately.
5. Stay home from work if you are feeling sick.
6. Avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth since the flu virus usually enters the body through those areas.
7. Eat well, exercise and get enough rest.
8. Get educated and know when the cold and flu are likely to hit your community.

Don't spend all winter experimenting with home remedies. Proactively protect yourself from cold and flu germs this season and you can stop your runny nose before it starts flowing, soothe your throat before it starts hurting and ease your aches before you start aching. – News Canada

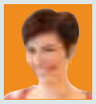
An apple a day... well, you know the rest



NUTRI-BITES

How do you like them apples?

Some are good to cook, others are best eaten out of hand, but the true Canadian Mac can do both.

McIntosh are great cold-weather fruit that have all the health benefits including vitamin C and high amounts of the gelatinous pectin that helps remove cholesterol from your system.

Have you thought of trying them like this?

- Braised in apple juice as a simple dessert.
- Used in cooking, particularly with pork.
- Cored and stuffed with oats, butter and cinnamon.
- Dipped in stout beer and served with nuts for cocktail hour.

Some apples turn to mush when baked but the mac holds its shape and lends its tart sweetness graciously.

This recipe serves two. COURTESY THERESA ALBERT

Something about sweet-tart Macs goes perfectly with pork chops and this recipe takes very few steps of prep then cooks itself in one pan.

1. Cut onion in half and into slices. Brown in oil for 2-3 minutes in a large, heavy skillet with a lid. Set aside.

2. Slice apples and set aside on a plate with the onions.

3. Brown each chop over high heat and place with apples.

4. Pour wine into pan and stir in apple butter and thyme. Add chops back with apples and onions, and cover. Turn down to medium and simmer 15 minutes until cooked through. Serve with mashed sweet potatoes. THERESA ALBERT IS A FOOD COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST AND TORONTO PERSONAL NUTRITIONIST. SHE IS @THERESAALBERT ON TWITTER AND FOUND AT MYFRIENDINFOOD.COM

Ingredients

- 1 onion
- 1 tsp grapeseed oil or other
- 2 McIntosh apples
- 1 lb pork chops, 2-3 thin chops
- 1 cup white wine or apple juice
- 2 tbsp apple butter or marmalade
- 2 tsp thyme
- salt and pepper, to taste

1. Season pork chops on both sides with salt and pepper. One at a time, dip chops in flour, coating well on both sides, but shaking off excess.

2. In skillet over medium-high, heat 1 tablespoon of oil. Add chops to pan and cook until lightly browned on first side, 2 minutes. Add remaining oil to skillet, turn chops and cook for 1 minute on second side. Transfer them to a plate and cover loosely with foil.

3. Add onion and grapes to skillet, reduce heat to medium-low and cook, stirring often, until onions are golden brown, about 3 to 4 minutes. Increase heat to high, add wine and bring to a boil. Simmer, stirring, until the wine is reduced to 1 tablespoon. Add veg or chicken broth and sugar and simmer until broth is reduced by half.

4. Reduce the heat to medium-low, return the pork to the skillet, along with any juices that have accumulated on the plate and simmer very gently, turning the pork several times, for 1 minute. Transfer each pork chop to a serving plate. Add the mustard to the sauce, whisking, then season with salt and pepper. Pour the sauce evenly over each portion and serve right away. Ingredients

- 4 1/2-inch-thick boneless pork chops, trimmed of any fat
- Kosher salt and black pepper
- Blending flour, for dredging
- 1 1/2 tbsp vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup finely chopped onion
- 1 cup seedless grapes, halved
- 1/4 cup dry white wine
- 3/4 cup low-sodium broth
- 1/2 tsp dark brown sugar
- 1 tbsp Dijon mustard

FIND YOUR TASTE FOR TEA AT TEALIFE

"There's a tea out there for everyone," says Meghan Cosenzo, owner of TeaLife in Regina.

Cosenzo helps people find teas to meet specific health needs or concerns, as well as taste.

About 80 per cent of TeaLife's teas are organic, and Cosenzo blends more than a dozen from scratch. Her wellness blends include teas to help with allergies, arthritis, energy, relaxation, stress relief, sleep, and health needs such as Athletics Essentials or Pregnantea.

She was once a coffee person, she admits, until she tasted loose tea. Since Regina had few high-quality loose tea boutiques, she decided to start her own business and become a certified tea specialist.

To help customers find the right tea, she also takes into account their favorite flavours and habits. "It really depends on the person."

Coffee drinkers enjoy robust flavors such as Roasted Dandelion Root, which has a dark, earthy flavour. Black tea-only lovers might move to flavours with hints of flower petals or fruit.

Each month she offers a featured specialty tea, such as Detox for January. She also recommends her unique flavour blends, such as Lavender Dream, Sultry Chai, and Paradise of Goji.

"A lot of times, it's really a matter of taste," Cosenzo says.

HEALTHY WINTER HEART HABITS

Health-conscious Canadians are paying particular attention to cardiovascular health. Seasonal changes can sometimes throw us off our regular routines and some people discard heart-healthy habits for more convenient, unhealthy behaviours.

Here are some tips to help you stay heart healthy this season.

1 Try to consume more heart-healthy foods like fresh fruits and vegetables, fish, nuts and berries. Avoid foods with high levels of trans fats. If you do decide to indulge in convenience or comfort foods, try to reduce your portion size.

2 Get outside and enjoy all that winter has to offer. Bundling up and going for a brisk winter stroll can be a great way to get exercise and appreciate the snowy landscape. If you have a pair of skates, visit an outdoor rink — this is the only time of year they open.

3 If you are a smoker, try to cut down or quit smoking this winter. Don't be afraid to reach out to friends and family members for support.

Money 101. Two couples, one year to make them richer

Keeping up with the Jones' in 2014

Do you ever wonder what the Jones' are actually doing with their money? If so, you will finally get a peek inside their bank account. For the next 12 months, I will be following the financial decisions of two Canadian couples. By uncovering each couple's money realities, and offering practical advice, we will map out a plan to help them reach their financial goals.

My ultimate goal in this social experiment is to increase each couple's net worth. The series will explore subjects like debt reduction, saving, major life changes like buying a home and having a baby, relationships and money, calculating how long it will take to save $1 million or pay off a house, and so much more. You will find plenty of resources throughout the year, so follow along with the homework I will be dishing out every month. – Lesley-Anne Scorgie/For Metro

TOTAL ASSETS	$1,500	TOTAL LIABILITIES	$34,000

*Cars aren't considered assets because they decrease in value whereas true assets grow in value.

Carolina and Jose married eight years ago and make their home in Calgary. The couple, aged 33 and 31, respectively, have three girls younger than five.

Jose works in the roofing business and does some freelance wedding photography to earn extra income. Between their eldest heading to kindergarten, potty training their toddler and soothing their teething infant, Carolina has her hands full as a stay-at-home mom. Carolina plans to return to work once their children all reach school age.

When government child tax benefits are included, the couple earns an annual income of approximately $55,000. After many years of feeling like they aren't getting ahead, Jose and Carolina are eager to improve their financial position. Together, they dream about one day having enough savings for retirement and some flexibility to travel.

Homework

- Jose and Carolina will put together their first budget using a free template and budgeting resources from their online bank, Google Docs or GetSmarterAboutMoney.com. They also plan on determining the value of a home they can afford and specific housing options for their growing family.

Currently, though, the couple lives frugally, enjoying the comforts of their own home and the inexpensive excitement of raising their family. When they aren't working or dedicating time to their children, Carolina loves to get creative with crafts, sewing, reading and writing, while Jose enjoys competitive video games, graphic design and socializing with old pals.

Jose and Carolina talk about money from time to time, but recognize that in order to achieve their financial goals they will have to increase their financial communication, including the immediate task of developing a realistic budget.

When asked, their top financial goals for 2014 are as follows:

1. Buy a house and stop paying rent to Jose's parents, whose home they are currently leasing.
2. Afford a trip to Ontario to visit family.
3. Chip away at their existing debts.

Jose and Carolina's current net worth is –$32,500.

THE NAMES OF BOTH COUPLES HAVE BEEN CHANGED TO PROTECT THEIR PRIVACY.

Anne-Marie and Peter

Assets		Liabilities
Anne-Marie's Pension	$73,000	Car Loan	$4,500

Peter's RRSP	$8,000	MBNA Low Rate Credit Card #2	$8,000
Car*	N/A
TOTAL ASSETS	$81,500	TOTAL LIABILITIES	$15,500

*Cars aren't considered assets because they decrease in value whereas true assets grow in value.

Anne-Marie and Peter are an active couple in Toronto, aged 36 and 33, respectively. They moved in together five years ago and married last year; they're now expecting their first child in June. Both enjoy their professions: Anne-Marie works in broadcasting and Peter is a senior sports editor for a medium-sized publishing house.

Their combined income hovers close to $110,000, which is more than the median Canadian household income of around $72,000.

The couple is fortunate to have money in their budget — yes, they actually have a budget tracked on a spreadsheet — to afford their hobbies, which, in Anne-Marie's case, is centred around the arts while Peter digs hockey and other sports.

They are big into the Toronto foodie scene and love to travel. But their culinary and travel pursuits still require frugality like couponing, paying attention to menu prices and seeking out last-minute travel deals.

The financial landscape for Anne-Marie and Peter is full of opportunity. They have healthy financial habits, such as sharing in the bill paying and aggressively paying down debt. Money conversations occur weekly and are rooted in respect and trust, which the couple says helps them stay on track and avoid financial arguments.

Homework

- Between this month and next, Anne-Marie and Peter plan on simplifying their budget (which currently spans multiple spreadsheets), determining the value of a home they could potentially afford to buy by sitting down with a banker for a mortgage pre-approval, and gathering information on Anne-Marie's pension program at work.

When asked who runs the day-to-day finances, Peter quickly pointed to Anne-Marie, labelling her as their household's CFO.

But this year financial change is on the horizon as Anne-Marie and Peter welcome their first child into their small, but well-located, rented apartment.

With that in mind, their top financial priorities for 2014 are as follows:

1. Pay off as much debt before the baby comes.
2. Start saving for their child's education.
3. Begin a savings program for a down payment on a home.

Anne-Marie and Peter's net worth is $66,600.

Rebuilding his Brad reputation in Boston

NHL. Bruins' 'Little Ball of Hate' finds scoring touch in recent days

Brad Marchand really didn't have an explanation for his recent run. He just wants it to last as long as possible.

Marchand continued his hot scoring stretch with a pair of goals Monday, lifting the Boston Bruins to a 3-2 win over the Los Angeles Kings.

He also had two in Boston's shootout loss in Chicago on Sunday and has scored six in his past four games.

After scoring just one goal in his initial 14 games this season, he's had 11 in his past 15.

"When bounces are going your way, you get more confidence," he said. "I think that's all that it is. I think early on I didn't feel confident in anything I was doing. Hopefully it'll continue."

The Bruins were also happy about how they played in consecutive games against strong teams, coming off the loss in a Stanley Cup rematch with the Blackhawks on Sunday.

"I've gotta be honest here," Boston coach Claude Julien said. "I was really impressed with how well we played."

On Monday

Bruins	Kings

Torey Krug had the other goal for the Bruins, who won at home for the 11th time in 13 games.

"We're very happy," Marchand said. "Two very good teams with back-to-back, with travel. This game was a really tough one. We've got to be happy. We played a great game yesterday."

Linemate Patrice Bergeron can see Marchand's confidence growing.

"Well, definitely confidence helps a lot," he said. "I think that's got something to do with it, but I think that he is really moving his feet and he's using his speed to his advantage and he's creating a lot of plays just by his hockey instincts. He's taking what's in front of him, he's not forcing plays."

League suspends Tortorella and fines Hartley

The NHL suspended Vancouver Canucks coach John Tortorella without pay for 15 days and six games on Monday for his conduct after a brawl between his team and the Calgary Flames.

Tortorella went to Calgary's locker-room at intermission following the first period Saturday night, which began with a handful of fights and four game misconducts per team.

Tortorella blamed Flames coach Bob Hartley for starting his fourth line, saying he couldn't put star players Daniel and Henrik Sedin at risk just to deflate the situation. Hartley was fined $25,000 US by the NHL.

Patriots coach Bill Belichick says Broncos wide receiver Wes Welker deliberately tried to "take out" cornerback Aqib Talib when they collided in the AFC championship game.

Welker, a former Patriot, says he was trying to get Talib to go behind him as the two headed for each other across the middle.

Head coach Corey Chamblin of the Grey Cup champion Saskatchewan Roughriders is one of three nominees for the CFL coach of the year award.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats head coach Kent Austin and Calgary Stampeders head coach John Hufnagel are also up for the honour. The winner will be presented with the Annis Stukus Trophy on Feb. 5 in Ottawa as part of the CFL's annual congress.

Chamblin, a first-time nominee, guided the Riders to an 11-7 record in the regular season. They defeated B.C. in the division semifinal and topped Calgary in the Western final to earn a berth in the Grey Cup at Mosaic Field.

The Roughriders beat the Tiger-Cats 45-23 in the championship game.

Hamilton finished the regular season with a 10-8 record and defeated Montreal and Toronto en route to the Grey Cup game. Austin previously won the Annis Stukus Trophy in 2007 as head coach of the Roughriders.

Hufnagel, who won the award in 2008, guided the Stampeders to a league-best 14-4 record. This is his third nomination.
